Field Study Activity Placement Agreement

This Agreement is between the Regents of the University of California on behalf of its Irvine Campus School of SOCIAL ECOLOGY referred to as "SOCIAL ECOLOGY", and _____, referred to as "PLACEMENT SITE."

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

As an interdisciplinary academic unit, SOCIAL ECOLOGY gives greater attention to the social, political, institutional, and cultural contexts of people-environment relations. Going beyond traditional teaching and research, it links scholarship to community needs and translates research into practical solutions benefiting us all. The objective of the field study program is to provide undergraduate students an opportunity to integrate academic study and field experience, while developing an understanding of organizational goals and objectives.

PLACEMENT SITE has an interest in providing a learning opportunity for undergraduate students where students can develop work-places skills and knowledge and practice research techniques in a field setting. The best placement situation is one where real agency needs and missions can be met at the same time the student is completing his/her academic requirements.
